

Welcome – We hope this issue finds you safe and well

This year's recent Health and Safety Expo has given HSfB the chance to meet quite a few of our valuable visitors/contributors, all of which share exactly the same passion for health, safety and environmental challenges as we do. We had a fantastic time and we will meet more of you next year, there are also rumours of an HSfB stand!

Please enjoy this bumper edition of the HSfB Noticeboard and don't forget to check out our recent awards for safety innovation on page 3!

Your Articles

Have you created any articles relating to health, safety or environmental issues at work? Would you like to publish them on HSfB so that they can help somebody in the future? If so, let us know and your article will be published in Your Articles pages. We will publish your articles, long or short, as long as they relate to health, safety and the environment in some way or another. You may be a specialist in a particular subject, or you simply want to take an interest in something, research it and write about it.

Send you articles to: hsfb@healthandsafetytips.co.uk

There is a certain degree of stigma attached to NEBOSH exams, which is certainly not helped by the notoriously low pass rates. It cannot be denied that they are very demanding, but would the qualifications be worth obtaining if assessment were via a simple multiple-choice exam? Whatever the merits of other health & safety qualifications, it cannot be argued that NEBOSH awards are still the number one choice of most prospective employers.

Despite what some say, it is not possible to learn the course material parrot fashion for the final exam. However, with hard work and an understanding of key concepts and basic principles, there is no need for any exam paper to be the cause of nightmares. Everyone studies in their own way, but the following are some general guidelines that just may make the difference between a referral and a pass with flying colours.
